Preface

Iqbal Review, the scholarly journal of the Iqbal Academy Pakistan, is a respected and enduring reference in the world of intellectual and academic research. Since its inception in April 1960, this journal has served as a distinguished platform for scholars and thinkers not only in Pakistan but across the globe, enabling them to explore and express their insights on Iqbal's thought, philosophy, religion, literature, and socio-cultural issues.

Over the course of more than half a century, Iqbal Review has established a unique identity among serious readers of Urdu and Persian literature and philosophy. This is owed to its commitment to high-quality research, diversity of themes, and international academic engagement.

The primary objective behind the compilation of this index is to make Iqbal Review's rich academic and research content more accessible, organized, and purposeful for readers, researchers, teachers, and students. With the help of this index, readers can now directly locate articles related to specific subjects, authors, or key concepts—saving time and effort while also enhancing the effectiveness of their scholarly pursuits.

This index not only organizes the journal's articles in a systematic manner but also enables readers to trace the evolving intellectual directions, thematic trends, and scholarly inclinations reflected in the research published in Iqbal Review. In today's digital age, where research heavily relies on online searches and accurate referencing, this index serves as a vital and efficient tool in facilitating academic exploration.

We hope that this index will serve as a valuable academic resource for contemporary researchers and will inspire emerging Iqbal scholars to explore new pathways of inquiry and reflection into the profound depths of Iqbal's thought. For those engaged in the field of Iqbal studies, this index will also prove instrumental in avoiding redundancy by identifying previously explored themes, while simultaneously opening avenues for fresh and original research possibilities.
